Business Development

Since 2008, I have developed a child's nature-based game that is the focal program for my Masters Research. It is called Wild Craft Play, and I am currently invited to prototype my game during my Masters research, package it and sell it to multiple interests. This game is being used as a private Behavior Interventionist, with children in homeschooling programs, at the Boys and Girls Clubs of Central Vancouver Island, and is now expanding into the school system.
